The telegraph tells us that the civilians sent to take the vote of the army are in the wsy of General Grant, and that he will probably send them out of his lines.

This simply means that the army is no ready to vote right. If the soldiers will vote right, they will have every facility to vote, even if Richmond is never taken. The President and his party think more of the vote of the army than they do of military success. What good will taking Richmond do them if they can't get the offices?

The soldiers must vote right, or not vote at all; and it is easy to flud good reasons why the vote could not be taken.

In order that soldiers may vote intelligently, they ought to hear and read both sides. They amongst themselves without hindrance. This, we all know, is not allowed, and all men can see the inconveniences of political discussions in military camps in the presence of enemies and the impossibility of men giving intelligent votes without opportunities of information and investigation.

When Democrats assign such reasons against soldiers voting, except at home in their precincts, we are met by a demagogue howl: You want to deprive the soldier of his right to vote. Give the soldier the same right to hear, and read, and discuss the questions that their friends at home have, and then let them vote; otherwise they may damage the very cause they are fighting for. We grant the soldier has a right to vote if any one has; but he has an equal right to the information that others that others have. If he can't have these, it is to vote. General Grant finds even the introduction of the subject very inconvenient, and it is surmised that civilians sent to take the vote will be dismissed. Well, no doubt about the inconveniences: right. If he will not, then, to avoid difficulty, it will be desirable so to arrange matters that only the loyal shall vote. We shall see, "Honthe other side too.

A moderate amount of fraudulent voting in a hard contest is to be expected. Great as is the outrage upon the right of suffrage, it is too common a crime to awaken much indignation. Indeed, the partisan can look at such deeds with philosophical resignation, if they are done by his party and for its benefit. He is only shocked when such deeds are done by his opponents, and for their benefit.

Still, heretofore, such frauds have been limited. They have been chiefly confined to large said it would end in thirty, sixty, ninety days; and finally, in six months or next year, all of which prophecies have been fulfilled with the same accuracy that this last one will be. If the people have not learned that there are the elements of strength in the South to last thirty years in resistance to a war of extermination, the lesson of the last four years has been most unprofitable. Have we not been told "by the reliable gentleman," and the "intelligent contraband," and numberless descretes, that they were starving; that they had neither food nor clothing; that their armies were demorallized and ready to break up at a blow? Yet ask the first soldier you meet, who last thirty years in resistance to a war of exdate their subscription will expire ten days in ad-vance of the time; and again with a second notice were demorallized and ready to break up at a wance of the last copy paid for is sent. This blow? Yet ask the first soldier you meet, who will enable all persons to keep the run of their achies struggled with these men in the field, and counts, and to renew in time not to miss an issue he will tell you all that you get in advantage from the rebel army is in hard fighting, and that in courage they are fully our equals. As far as absolute control over the entire military resources of the sections is possible the South has, and will have, the advantage so long as our terms for them are submission or extermination.

We have been told so often and deceived so often about the early termination of the war that we are utterly blind-blinded as those whom they wish to destroy, the gods first make mad-if we do not see that there is literally no end to this war on the present programme It will take all the military force of twenty two or twenty-three States to place and keep in subjection, or to hold in subjection, the remaining eleven or twelve States. The right way and the only way is to try and effect an honorable compromise, and that opportunity is now presented. Unless the unity of the South is broken we can do nothing, and a South is broken we can do nothing, and a Unien without the fair, unbiased consent of the South and of the North would not be worth having. With such great influences in the South as Stephens, Johnson, Brown, and Boyce, of South Carolina, ought we not to hope for a compromise, and meet them half way?

Let every one remember what consti tutes this Republican party. Those who, with Davis, denounced it as having suffered the Government to be swindled out of more money in one year than the whole cost of Buchanan's administration for the full term Those whom Van Wyck, of New York, proved to have been engaged in peculation or speculation at the rate of $90,000 in two

We have not given half the list of peculation, panders, party serfs, bubbles, six-inch despots, failures, humbugs, chimney-piece Generals and blackguard followers who go to constitute the great Lincoln phalanx, but we have two more to add. One is the Hon. Andy Johnson, of Tennessee, who issued a proclamation that no one should be allowed to vote but those who voted for him; and lastly, the Hon. Abraham Lincoln, 19.h, and hopes to be 20th President of the United States.

Among the absurd excuses offered to the plan of such a scheme as that of Alex. H. have, and to the same means of information Stephens is one that "it will result in disunion." There is not the slightest reason for believing thus, but its absurdity is ridiculous.

What has any other plan resulted in but disunion? More About the Monster Paine.

(From the Nashville (Tenn) Dispatch. A few weeks ago we reproduced in these columns the statement of the Caira correspondent of the St. Louis Rapublican in regard to the acts of Brigadier General A. R. Paine, while in command at Paducah, Ky.

A FEW INCEDENTS IN THE REIGN OF BRIG. GET A. E. PAINE AT GALLITIN, TENM.

From December, 1862, to March or April From December, 1862, to March or April. 1864, during the bloody reign of Brig. General A. E. Paine at Gallatin, Tenn., those who did not witness the barbarous deeds committed, and the wholesale robbery of private property, will scarcely believe human rature so corrupt, when the stubborn facts are revealed and made known to the world.

made known to the world.

There was a lady of respectability who lived in Gallatin, who had a little daughter about to die. Her house had been taken from her and ocupied, and she was staying with a friend at occupied, and she was staying with a friend at the time she made an application to General Paine, through her friends, to be permitted to carry the remains of her chill to Hartsville for interment, a place held sacred by her as the family burial ground. This was most positively denied and refused her, and General Paine seet a message to her to send for her "damped rebel busband," thus in the rebel army, to come and take it and bury it. She was forced to have it buried at Gallatin, and was refused the privilege of attending her little was refused the privilege of attending her little daughter's burial not half a mile distant. A gentleman who lost his wife in Gallatin, was refused the privilege of attending her burial, not a quarter of a mile from his residier General's reien, but will give two cases to illustrate his total disregard of law and the rights of a defenseless people. The first is the case of a minor, a young The first is the case of a minor, a young girl aged about sixteen, whose father and mother were both dead. This minor owned a negro man, and her guardian hired him out for the year 1863 for the sum of $100. This negro man served his time out with the hirer. During the Christmas holidays he visited Gen. Paine at his headquarters, at Gallatin. What report the negro made is known only to Gen. Paine, but he (the negro) brought back an official order from Gen. Paine, addressed to the hirer, ordering him to pay the negro onethe birer, ordering him to pay the negro one-balf of his hire, and the other balf to his quar-termaster at Gallatin. The guardian went to Gen. Paine for an explanation, and applied to have the order rescinded. Gen. Paine refused to do so, and insisted that the ward was se-

The other case was that of an old blind man aged eighty years, and who had been blind for many years. He has several sons, none of whom are in the army. He is a Union man; so are his sons. The old man and his wife lived to themselves. He owned a few negroes, who made enough for them to live upon. General Paine sent his wagons and took from him at least $500 worth of corn, cats, fodder and hay leaving him destitute. His soas made appli-cation time after time for pay, and finally vouchers were given to the amount of four hundred dollars. The vouchers were left with one of General Paine's staff officers, to be ap-proved. When they were called for by his son they were said to be lost, and the son was in-formed that General Paine said they should not be paid, and the old man has never recov-ered one cent.

A large number of citizens were arrested prisoners, and such cursing and abuse as they would receive from this dignitary of our Government would chill the blood of a Christian heart. Two cases the writer will give as illus Gen. Banks, who had the honor to be Stone-wall Jackson's commissary in the Shenandosh Valley, and then Dick Taylor's commissary in Louisians, and finally as the crowning victory of all—persons, and there was never a charge or ac-cusation made against him.

The other case is that of a most estimable gentleman, aged seventy-five years, who was arrested, carried to Gallatin and put in the same prison, and there kept for weeks, a porsame prison, and there are to reverse, a por-tion of which time the old man was too feeble to rise from his little dirty couch, even to at-tend the calls of nature. General Palne visited the prison and saw the condition of this old man. This man was a soldier in the war of 1812, following his favorite leader, Jackson through all his campaigns, and never left him until he shed a halo of glory around the American name on the glorious battle-field of American name on the glorious battle-field o New Orleans. This old man was finally released from prison without a charge being preferred

During General Paine's stay at Gallatin, i should an investigation be had, the fate of those men might be ascertained.

The longer General Paine continued at the permanent, and we will devolve an inheritance of user upon our descendants. Bully! and if we don't save the Union by that means, we will among the people of Sumner county has never been witnessed in this or any other age. Some few persons proposed to go to Nashville to see portant than our descendants—to-wit, our-selves.

The message was delivered to young Dalton and he promptly obeyed, accompanied by his father, and met General Paine at the head of his command. So soon as General Paine saw him, he ordered a file of soldiers to take and shoot him. Young Dalton was taken by surprise at this announcement, and asked for the charge against him, but none was given. General Paine raved and swore that he should die.

The shot took effect in his leg, and the young man screamed, which was distinctly heard by his father. The second shot took effect in the breast and the third in the head, when the screaming ceased in death. Nothing could be heard but the involuntary lamentations of the father, he himself, perhaps, unconscious of such lamentations, for his life had already been threatened for them.

Gen. Paine, during the bloody process, was raving and cursing that aged and lacerated parent. It does seem that any man with a heart less hard than adumant would have been moved; but not so that of Brig. Gen. E. A. Paine, of Illinois. O my God! who can adequately describe such a scene? What pen can portray this awful tragedy, witnessed by that aged and broken-hearted man, and then, kneeling beside the mangled corpse of a child just a few moments before in full vigor and health, to hear the groans and the sobs, to see the wretched countenance of the venerable sire over the favorite child a corpse under Law Unfounded. NEW YORK, October 27. The Tribune's Washington special says the nilitary commission, Major General Doubleducab, and the facts can be learned by all who so wish from almost every citizen of the place, Republican or Democrat. During General Paine's reign a man went to him and informed try a recently discovered case of most as-try a recently discovered case of most astrounding frauds and forgeries connected with the New York State soldiers' votes.

The charges are, in brief, substituting McClellan for Lincoln votes in the original envelopes submitted by the soldiers, and in forging names thereto. One box over three feet long, containing many thousands of these fraudulent votes, has been selved, and others are known to have been sent to New York. The developments in this case premise to be of the most startling character. im that a certain man, llying some seven or ght miles from the town, was a rebel sympa-nizer, and that at one time he had killed a gion man, &c., &c. He did not, nor was he Union man, &c., &c. He did not, nor was he saked to, make oath to his statement, and it should be further remembered that the informant had had a personal difficulty with the man he informed upon. General Paine ordered a squand of negroes to go to the house of this man, arrest and shoot him, and bring his body to Paducah, that he might with his own eyes see that he was dead. The negroes went and arrested him. The gentleman's family were in the greatest grief at his arrest, but he assured his wife and children that the General would certainly release him as soon NEW YORK, Oct. 27.

It is thought generally to be in articula receiving the confederacy.

General would certainly release him as soon as he could see him; that he had never been guilty of anything, and, therefore, it must be some mistake by which he was arrested. The family were comforted with the belief that the busband and father would certainly more than the belief that the busband and father would certainly Confederacy. It is thought generally to be in articulo mortis at this juncture.

The convened Governors, after a free interchange of opinions, resolved in substance that there is no cause for them to be discouraged, but it is imperative to increase their armies immediately; to recommend that Legislatures repeal all laws prohibiting the sending of troops outside State limits; to urge the Confederate authorities to conscript every man everaged in the various departments whose that the husband and father would certainly return that evening to his home; but night came and he did not return. Morning came, and their auxisty compelled them to send to Paducah to hear what doings they could of swered that he could not tell them. Thus matters continued for four days, when the friends of the family found the body in the pesthouse, risidled with builets and partially devoured by rats; and then General Paine thought he was taxing his humanity to allow them to take the mutilated and decaying remains and have them decently buried. This murdered man was not even guilty of the high crime of being a Democrat. He had incurred the displeasure of a Paducah legguer, an intense patriot, and an intenser Lincoln man, and therefore he was the victim of one of the most diabolical outrages upon record. Yet General Paine is the idolized pet of the Lincoln party, not only in Scuthern Illinois, but throughout the land. ugaged in the various departmen's whose lace can be supplied by disabled officers, sol-iers, or negroes; to recommend legislative en-ctments for the arrest of deserters; to make it imperative that negroes be removed from the front, exposed to Union armies; that the course of the United States Government in sppropristing slaves to the purpose of war demands a change of policy on their part; and they recommend the Confederate authorities under proper requisitions, to an part; and they recommend the Contentate authorities, under proper regulations, to appropriate such part of them, the negroes, to the public service as may be required; that the Confederate Congress remove all restrictions on the commerce of Individual States; and the Governors close with the usual flummery about maintaining the rights of sovereign States, achieving their independence, &c.

They took all they wanted and proceeded to the residence of Mr. Wm. Graham and robbed him of $500. They left there and went in the direction of Mr. Taylor Graham's, and upon arriving there they stole three very valuable horses and left. They shally went to the residence of Mr. Robt. Mr. G. refused to give them the horse, when they domanded to give them the horse, when they domanded of him a fine gun which they knew he had in his possession. This he also refused to let them have, when they entered his house, and, after searching a while, found the gun in a room where Mr. Graham's wife and children were sitting. Mr. Graham undertook to take the gun away from them, when they fired several shots at him, killing him instantly. NUMBER 101;

Bridget as she Was, and Bridget as she Is.

a thick "stuff" dress, raised high above ankles which are shaped for use; stout leather shoes; hands red and gloveless; a bon-net of obsolete shape and trimmings; a face round as the moon, from which the rich red blood, made of potatoes and pure air, seems ready to burst; great honest eyes, always down-cast when addressed by those whom the old country styles "superi-Such is Bridget when she first steps from the deck of the good ship "Maria" at Castle Garden.

Bridget goes to "a place." The pert housemaid titters when she appears, square and wholesome, like a human cow. Bridget's ears catch the word "greenborn," and "she might as well be a grandmother as to be only seventeen." Bridget looks furtive-ly at the smart though cheap dress of the hambermaid, with its inevitable flimsy uffled skirt and tinsel buttons, and then at her despised "best dress," which she has been wont to keep so tidy for Sundays and holidays. She looks at the thin, paper-soled gaiters of the critical housemaid, and then at her stout, dew-dying brogans. looks at her own thick masses of hair, fastened up with only one idea-to keep it out of the way-and then at the housemaid's elaborate parlor imitation of puff and braid and curl. The view subdues her.

She is for the first time ashamed of her own thick natural tresses. She looks at her peony cheeks, and contrasts them with the sickly but "genteel" pallor of the housemaid's, and gradually it dawns upon her why they whispered "greenhorn" when she stepped in the kitchen that first day. But the housemaid, overpowering as she is to Bridget, suffers a total eclipse when the lady of the house sweeps past in full dress. Bridget looks-marvels, adores, and vows to imitate. That hair! Those jewels! That ong trailing skirt and embroidered petti-oat. Did anybody ever? Could Bridget herself in any way reach such perfection? She blushes to think that only last night, in her home sickness, she actually longed to milk once more the old red cow in the cherished farmyard. How ridiculous! She doubts whether that sumptuous lady ever saw a cow. The idea that she, Bridget, had been contented all her life to have only ows to look at her. By the way, why should that curly-head-ed grocer-boy talk so much to the housemaid, and never to her? A light dawns on her dormant brain. She will fix her hair the way to catch the grecer-boys. She, too, will have a ruffled skirt to drag through the utter, though she may never own any unerclothes. She will have some brass earrings and bracelets and things, and some paper-soled boots, with her first wages; and as to her bonnet, it is true, she can afford only one for market and 'mass;" for rain and shine; for heat and for cold; but by St. Patrick, it shall be a fourteen dollar dress hat," anyhow, though she may never own a pair of Indiarubbers or a flannel petticoat, or a pocket handkerchief, or an ountry ! Just as if that spiteful housemaid was going to have all the grocer-boys to herself! Bridget will see about that. Her eyes are pretty blue; and as to her hair, it is at east her own; yes, ma'am; no "rats" will be necessary for her; that will save some-

And so the brogans, and the dark "stuff" dress, and the thick stockings and shawl come to grief; and in two months time flash s written all over Bridget from the crown f her showy hat to the tips of her crucified toes, squeezed into narrow, paper-soled, fashionable, high-heeled gaiters. And as to her "superiors," gracious goodness! America is not Ireland, nor England neither, I'd have you to know. You had better just mention that word in Bridget's hearing now, and see what will come of it. FANNY FERN.

Governor Hall has justarrived here from Independence. He was escorted through by Coptain Foster with a small detachment. On the way, near Pleasant Hill, Captain Foster met a force of two or three hundred rebel recruits going to Price. After skirmishing a little with him, they went their way without attacking him. The Governor came very near being gobbled. The Governor came very near being gobbled. The Governor thinks our carvalry under Pleasanton, Curtis and Blunt, are damaging Price's rear considerably.

There has been a great mistake made in the disposition of our forces, but there is reason to hope that it may now be rectified. Pleasanton is represented as having waked up and gone to work, and the soldiers say he is again the old Pleasanton of the Potomac.

Price is clearly making his way through Kansas, but he is aprinkling the road with the blood of his best men.

A Jameth, with his infuntary, will not be man of law. She made love to him, in fact, very strongly, and persuaded him to visit her at her house. But alas! he loved another lady. One evening, while conversing with the doctor, she said: "Why, with the said of the conversion of the said of the conversion of the said of the sa with your favorable idea of matrimony, may I ask if you ever thought of marrying yourself?" Dr. Kantsighed (and his eyes resting on the ground), hesitatingly muttered in reply: "I have already thought of marrying, and made my choice, but-" "But?" the lady hastily interposed. "But," he continued, "the lady is rich, very rich, and I am poor. I am afraid I could hardly aspire to her hand, and, rather than allow myself to be taxed with sordid designs, will bury my passion in my breast, and leave it unvowed forever." At an early hour the following day she, however, betook herself to a solicitor, and, in legal form, declared her wish to present and hand over as his property the sum of 150,-The Tribune's correspondent with Butler, the 24th, says the action of the rebel Generals plainly indicates their intention to call their slaves to aid them in their desperate straft. It may not be inopportune to state this importantiact, namely: that their army confronting us before Richmond and Petersburg is now known to be reduced to not exceeding 35,000 men, all told.

Jeff. Davis, Lee and Longstreet, and other distinguished rebels, yesterday rode along the lines in our front, and then went back to Richmond, deserters say, sadder if not wiser men.

Torm, declared her wish to present and hand over as his property the sum of 150,000 men, she sum of 150,000 guilden (£15,000) to Dr. Kant. When the document had been signed, countersigned and duly completed, she sat down in the office, and, inclosing it in an elegant envelop, added a note to the following effect:

"Dear Sir—I have much pleasure in inclosing a paper which I hope will remove the obstacle in the way of your marriage. Believe me, etc., Alice Martini."

Believe me, etc., Alice Martini."

Dr. Kant, for he and no other man was the addressed, was the happiest man in the world on receiving this generous epistle. Repairing at once to the parents of Frau-lein Fischel, the lady of his love, he proposed for and received the hand of a girl who had long been flattered by his delicate though unavowed intentions. His reply to Fraulein Martini, besides conveying sincerest thanks, contained two cartes de visite, linked together by the significant rose-colored ribbon. Miss Martini forthwith sued the happy bridegroom for restitution, but as no promise of marriage had been made, the case was by two successive courts decided against her.

The Bishop of Carlisle is credited with a joke. It is said that a young clergyman not far from Penrith, being on the eve of marriage, and not wishing to trouble any of his brethern, wrote the Bishop, inquiring, as he had already published the bans from his own pulpit could be marry himfrom his own pulpit, could he marry him-self? His lordship made no long appeal to laws ecclesiastical, but at once capped the query with another: "Could you bury

ANOTHER NOVELTY IN THE PHOTOGRAPHIC ART.—A London photographer has recently introduced a novelty in the mode of taking cartes de visite photographs with the signature of the sitters appended. This gives but little extra trouble. The sitter simply signs his name on a slip of paper, and finds its fac-simile, diminished iff size, transferred to the portraits when they come home.

"Dear me!" exclaimed a lady, as she looked at the boa-constrictor in a show, why, the skin of the creature is of a regular tartan pattern." "It is, my dear," re-marked her husband, "and that is what Shakespeare alluded to when he talked about a snake being 'scotched'."

Democratic Meeting.

There will be a meeting of the Democracy on Saturday evening at 7 o'clock, on the corner of Eleventh and Market streets. Judge Bullock, Hon. Ham. Pope, Mr. Phil. Tomppert, and Mr. Wm. Reasor will be present and address the crowd. Let everybody turn out on the occasion.

Democratic Meeting Last Night.

Notwithstanding the short notice given, there was an immense gathering of the friends of McClellan at Turner Hall last night. The crowd present, unlike those which assemble to hear Abolition harangues, consisted of merchants, mechanics, and the very bone and sinew of our city, all of whom are enthusiastic in their support of the warrior and the statesman, " Little Mac," as he is familarly termed. The meeting was addressed by the Hon. W. F. Bullock, Hon. Hamilton Pope and W. G. Reason, Esq. who in strains of elequence showed up the imbecility and bad faith of the present Administration, and urged the claims of the standard bearer of the Democracy, who is destined to restore a now distracted and bleeding country to its former peace and prosperity. During the remarks of these gentlemen, they were often interrupted with rounds of applause, which were given with a will and zest. The meeting broke up with three rousing cheers for McClellan and Pen-

A Tragedy of the Des Moines.

'Twas the spring of '58, during a brief sojourn in the Hawkeye State, that the following incident came within the writer's observation. The reader will recollect this was the "long rainy season," when carriage traveling at best was slow and toilsome, but here, among our trackless, undulating prairies, where streams rise to an unaccountable hight in a half hour, it was not only dangerous, but oftentimes impractica-ble. One might go out in the morning for a dozen miles' ride—cross "sloughs" whose depth would scarcely exceed a few inches, and by the evening's return find these same streams so swollen and turbulent as to utterly preclude all further progress.

Twas during one of these sudden fresh-

ets, while detained for a day at a low, miserable hut, that the terrible tragedy we are about to relate occurred. Our route not being in the vicinity of a railroad, we were necessitated to the only alternative of traveling by private conveyance. Owing to the miry state of the roads, and the constant rise of the sloughs, a journey of two hundred miles, which should have been completed in one week, was protracted to three. We had set out with light hearts and glowing hopes, and for a few days the bright, warm sunlight and smooth roads gave promise of a delightful journey. It was refreshing indeed to leave the close, dusty streets of the city, for the green, flowery carpet of the prairies; but the heavy rains coming on, the black soil giving at every step abundant evidence of its adhesive faculty, the broad prairies, now dreary and monotonous, rendered our journey dull

And seeking entertainment at the little cabins scattered at long intervals along our route, and that of a questionable kind, was by no means the least disagreeable feature of the journey. The people were mostly of the lower classes of Carolinians, living in frail, shabby tenements, though with the redeeming quality of being able bravely to withstand the wild, sweeping winds, and so constructed as to admit of thorough ventilation: there were no pretensions to cleanliness-their chief subsistence, meats, coffee It was in one of these shaky, dilapidated huts, and among such a people, that we were domesticated on the night of that terrible tragedy, which even now to recall, causes the blood to chill in our veins. About mid-afternoon, a heavy, driving rain had set in, compelling us thus early to seek shelter for the night. We sought and received admittance at the nearest house, but the suspicious aspect of things without and within immediately aroused our worst fears and we heartily wished ourselves out again pitiless storm, rather than at the mercy of these forbidding people. There were rough bearded men, slatternly and uncouth women and sqalid children; the men looking askance at us from beneath their shaggy eyebrows, and exchanging knowing glances with each other; the children came gaping around, munching cold pork and johnny-cake, ferocious dogs smelling our garments with dissatisfied growls; even the black cat squinted at us with half-shut eyes from her perch on the meat-tub. But what were all these men and women doing here? As we were subsequently informed, this little cabin aspired to the dignity of "boarding-house," having been erected for the temporary accommodation of the new arrivals from "back yonder," until they could be-come established in homes of their own; also to the view of accommodating such unfortunate travelers as ourselves.

Half an hour before sunset the storm subsided, and we took our station at the window to while away the slowly dragging moments. We were scarcely seated ere a new comer made his appearance, and began pacing up and down the little path before The dashing attire and distingui air of such a one in such a place, riveted our attention at once. He wore pants of a rich brown, coat of fine, glossy black, elaborate vest pattern, and a large, showy breastpin, a flowing necktie, and the head set off with a jaunty smoking cap of scarlet material. The hair and whiskers were of jetty blackness, the nose a beautiful Roman, and small, round eyes that regarded you with a look at once grave and cunning. e was very proud-any one could see that from the pompous bearing as he walked up and down the little path, and the conse-quential air with which he paused now and then to take observations of the sky. And yet, with all his pride, he looked sad and His very pride was beautiful. Who was he? where did he come from? what was driven by the storm to this miserable shelter among these miserable people? With these and similar questions we plied ourselves, and finally gave an affirmative answer to the latter as the most probable conclusion. But the while we were speculating upon this new object of curiosity, he disapretired, as we subsequently ascertained, to an adjoining apartment; for the cabin, miserable as it was, boasted its suite of

The subsidence of the storm was brief. Again the dark threatening clouds gather-ed above and around; the wind rose high and still higher, and once more the storm-king raged in all his terrible fury. The little house trembled and shook before the that the next moment it would be dashed to the ground; ioose boards rattled and creaked in the wind and the rain-drops came pelting furiously against the window panes; the roar of the swollen, turbulent river, as it rushed madly on its course, rose to our ears, and above all could be heard the angry howling and barking of the wolves in their nightly wanderings for

It seemed an age, but five minutes could not have elapsed ere a cry so startling, so piercing, rang out far above the raging elements, that instantaneously we were upon our feet, but we could not move further, could not shout an alarm though life depended upon it. Strangely enough, that frantic cry had not aroused the household, the stillness was deathlike—terrible!

A long time, so it seemed to us, and door below was softly opened. Pausing moment to hush the tumultuous beating of our heart, we again knelt down to the aperture, and, oh horror of horrors! There lay the stranger we had seen from our window! Shuddering and half paralyzed with fear, yet we could not withdraw our gaze—we seemed riveted to the spot; we could neither speak nor move; our very heart seemed to stand still!

Rifling the poor victim of his valuables he was stripped of his gay attire, the latter being immediately consigned to the flames. The head was nearly severed from the body, and lay weltering in a pool of blood; in strange, terrible contrast looked the LADIES', MISSES' & CHILDRENS white breast from that dark crimson tide Poor one! terrible to meet death thus! so far from home and friends, it might be, and we, a weak, frightened woman, sole witness of the dark deed! > [From the Prairie Farmer.] LITTLE GIRLS.

BY MRS. M. L. BAYNE. I cannot well imagine a home more in mplete than that one where there is no ittle girl to stand in the void of the dome tic circle which boys can never fill, and to COMMISSION MERCHANTS draw all hearts within the magic ring by the nameless charm of her presence. There is something about little girls which is especially lovable; even their little willful naughty ways seem utterly void of evil when they are so soon followed by the sweet penitence that overflows in such gracious showers. Your boys are great noble fel-lows, generous, loving, and full of good im-pulse, but they are noisy and demonstra-tive, and dearly as you love them, you are glad their place is out of doors; but Jennie with her light step is always beside you; she brings the slippers for papa, and with her pretty dimpled fingers unfolds the paper for him to read; she puts on a thimble no bigger than a fairy's, and with some very mysterious combination of "doll rags," fills up a small rocker by mamma, with a wonderful assumption of womanly dignity. And who shall tell how the little thread of speech that flows with such sweet, silvery lightness from those innocent lips, twines itself around the mother's heart, never to rust, not even when the dear little face is

But Jennie grows to be a woman, and half-latched door of childhood, till the girl blooms into the mature woman. There are the brothers who always lower their voices when they talk to their sister, and tell of the sports in which she takes almost as much interest as they do, while in turn she in-structs them in all the little minor details of home life, of which they would grow up ignorant if not for her. And what a shield she is upon the dawning manhood wherein so many temptations lie. Always her sweet presence to guard and inspire them, a check upon profanity, a living sermon on immorality. How fragrant the cup of tea she hands them at the evening meal, how cheery her voice as she relates the little incidents of the day. No silly talk of incipient beaux, or love of young men met on the promenade. A girl like that has no empty space in her head for such thoughts to run riot in, and you don't find her spending the evening in the dim parlor with a quest able young man for her company. When her lover comes, he must say what he has to say in the family sitting-room with father and mother; or if he is ashamed to, there is no room for him there. Jennie's young heart has not been filled by the pernicious nonsense which results in so many unhappy marriages or hasty divorces. Dear girl, she thinks all the time of what a good home she has, what dear brothers, and on bended knees craves the blessing of Heaven to rest on them, but she does not know how far, how very far, for time and know how far, how very far, for time and eternity, her own pure example goes, how it will radiate as a blessing into other homes PITTSBURG COAL. where a sister's memory will be the conse-

Cherish then the little girls, dimpled darlings who tear their aprons, and cut the table-cloths, and eat the sugar, and are themselves the sugar and salt of life! Let them lonely; and he was handsome-very hand-heart's content, and don't tell them Tom Tnumb and Red Riding Hoed are fiction, but leave them alone till they find it out, he doing here? Like ourselves had he been which they will all too soon. Answer all the funny questions they ask, and don't make fun of their baby theology, and when you must whip them, do it so that if you should remember it, it would not be with tears, for a great many little girls lose their hold suddenly before the door from which they have just escaped is shut, and find peared as suddenly as he had come, having their way back to the angels. So be gentle with the darlings, and see what a track of sunshine will follow in the wake of the lit-tle bobbing heads that daily find a great

Oh, it was fearful! Never, never can we forget that night—so wild without, so wild with fear within!

The children—half a score or more—were early packed away for the night in some hidden recess; the women gathered into little knots, and smoked and gossipped; the men discussed adventures in wolf-hunting, and sipped potations from a suspicious looking bottle; our uncle and trayeling companion nodded over an old newsomes a form of expression at once poetic

MEDICAL.

From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1856 From a Foresering merchant of St. Louis, res. 1, 1000.

Dz. Araz: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of ulcerous sores upon her hands and feet that had proved incurable for rears. Her mother has been long grievously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and in her hair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her.

ASA MORGRIDGS. As a Family Medicine.

From Dr. E. W. Cartteright, New Orleans. Your Pills are the prince of purges. Their excellent qualities surpass any cathartic we posses. They are ulid, but very certain and effectual in their action on he bowels, which makes them invaluable to us in the iaily treatment of disease. Headache, Sick Headache and Foul Stomach.

From Dr. Edward Boyd, Baltime DEAR BRO. AYER: I cannot answer you tohat cemplaints I have cured with your Pills better than to say all that use ever freat with a puryative medicine, place great dependence on an effectual cathartic in my daily contest with disease, and believing as I do that your Pills afford us the best we have, I of course value them highly.

PITTSBURG, PA., May I. 1865.

DR. J. C. AYER—Sir: I have been repeatedly cured of the worst headdone any body can have by a dose or two of your Pills. It seems to arise from a foul stomach which they cleanse at once.

Yours with great respect. ED, W. PREBLE.

Clerk of Steamer Clariou. Bilious Disorders-Liver Complaints From Dr. Theodore Bell, of New York City. From Dr. Theodore Bell, of New York City.

Not only are your Fills admirably adapted to theb purpose as an aperient, but I find their beneficial effect upon the Liver very markel indeed. They have in my practice proved more effectual for the cure of biliows completents than any one remedy I can mention. I six cerely rejoice that we have at length a purgative which is worthy the confidence of the profession and the periods.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, Washington, D. C., 7th February, 1856. Washington, D. C., 7th February, 1896. 1

Size: I have used your Pills in my general and hospital practice ever since you made them, and cannot hospitate to say they are the best cathartic we employ. The regulating action on the liver is and secied decided accountly they are an admirable remedy for derain sequently they are an admirable remedy for derain case of bilious diseases so obstinate that it did not read by yield to them. Too much cannot be said of your Pills for the cure of sciences. If others of our fraternity have foun seem as efficacious as I have, they should join me i reclaiming it for the benefit of the multitudes who sure from that complaint, which, although had enough it self, is the progenitor of others that are worse. I be exceeded the progenitor of others that are worse. I have coefficieness to originate in the liver, but your Pill frect that organ and cure the disease.

From Mrs. E. Shurt, Physician and Midwife, Boster 1 and 1 I find one or two large doses of your Pills, taken at the roper time, are excellent promotives of the nathernoored when whole or partially suppressed, and also the second of the second
